COMMUNITY SPOTLIGHT

MEET Patrick Roskam

Patrick Roskam and his wife, Kimberly, moved to Humboldt County in 2010, settling in Blue Lake after years of camping trips that made them fall in love with the area. -They always imagined retiring here, and about six or seven years ago Patrick did just that after a long career in health care. Today, he enjoys retirement, spending plenty of time with his dog and staying connected to the community.

Patrick has been shopping at Murphy's Markets for 16 years, with the Glendale location being his go-to store. -"It's so convenient, right off the freeway," he says. -"I know I'm always going to find what I'm looking for. The store is clean, organized, and easy to shop." What truly keeps him coming back is the people. -"When I walk through the doors, I feel like I'm visiting family."

Patrick is especially fond of -Humboldt Grass Fed Beef, saying, -"I've never tasted a steak as good as that." He also appreciates the fresh produce, well-stocked meat counter, and the deli's hot food selection.

Shopping local matters deeply to Patrick. -"I want to keep my money local and support local jobs," he says, noting Murphy's support of schools, youth sports, and community events.

Above all, Murphy's feels personal. -"I enjoy the conversations I have with the employees," Patrick shares. -"I run into friends and neighbors, stop to chat, and catch up on what's happening in Blue Lake. Murphy's really feels like the community meeting place."

Arcata, Eureka Protests Call Out ICE and Trump

More than 100 students and community members showed up near the Cal Poly Humboldt campus at the David Josiah Lawson mural at the D Street Community Center for a student-led walkout protest on Jan. 23 in solidarity with Free America walkouts across the country. Participants brought signs or picked one up from a donated stack, shared handouts with the words to chants and passed out masks. 50501 organizer AJ and Rick Toledo of CPH’s Students for a Democratic Society were among organizers. The group marched to the Arcata Plaza, where they gathered to hear several speakers, before returning to the starting point.

Among those speaking to the crowd, Brenda Perez, executive director of Centro del Pueblo, warned that it’s “when, and not if, ICE comes to Humboldt County,” and led the walkout protestors in chanting the Centro del Pueblo hotline number (707) 200-8091 to call in case of an ICE presence. Perez encouraged everyone to report suspected sightings to the hotline number first and not to post on social media until it’s confirmed by the call and the

'BIGGER THAN ALL OF US'

A fire relief weekend across Arcata

By Kimberly Wear
kim@northcoastjournal.com

Scenes from the Arcata downtown fire on Jan. 2 that destroyed a city block of businesses, apartments and art studios.

Plans for the Arcata Rising fund-raising shows this weekend began coming together the night of the Jan. 2 fire.

Sitting at Dead Reckoning Tavern, just a few blocks away from the devastation, and reeling from the conflagration they had just watched devour a block of shops, homes and studios, Humbrews owner Shelley Ruhl says she turned to former owner Andy Ardell and said, "Let's throw a benefit concert."

From there, things came together quickly. Ardell, who still books the acts for the venue, reached out to Brian Swizlo, keyboardist for Object Heavy and other local bands, who in turn reached out to some of his friends and bandmates to see if they wanted to play. The response was overwhelming.

"Within 24 hours, I had close to 20,"

Swizlo says, adding that's grown to more than 30 bands as well as DJs, hosts and visual artists. "At first, we were going to do one day on Saturday. It just got too big. ... Everyone just wanted to be down."

Taking the three-day show under his wings has been a challenge, Swizlo acknowledges, bringing together not only the talent but the sound managers, pit crews and other behind-the-scenes personnel needed to pull off what he willingly admits is an "over-the-top, nearly impossible" schedule of 30-minute sets with 10 minutes in between acts performing on two stages.

"I just feel that there were firefighters running into the fire and people who don't have their birth certificates anymore, so I'll be fine. We'll be fine," he says. "I know it's bigger than all of us and it's doable and it's exciting. I'm just looking at the list now and going, 'How are all of these bands available?'"

Ruhl agrees. "There's just so much support. It's amazing," she says, describing the way everything came together as a "feat of meticulous scheduling and selflessness."

All the money raised from the shows — Friday is a regularly ticketed show while Saturday and Sunday will be a $10 minimum suggested donation at the door — are going to the businesses and residents impacted. Additionally, Humbrews is donating $1 from each pint and 25 percent from orders of two specials on offer at the event.

And, Ruhl notes, she's working with Pay It Forward Humboldt as her "accountability partner in getting the money to the right places."

Swizlo says he feels a sense of magnitude in the placement of some acts, who will be performing in front of the main window — the space where bands used to play back in the day — with the charred remains of the 800 block of H Street visible in the background, calling it both "nostalgic" and "poignant."

One of the reasons they published the exact time of each set on Saturday and Sunday, Swizlo says, is to make sure people know when their favorite bands are playing, so they can go out and be part of the other events happening around town on those days.

Known collectively as Arcata Fire Relief Support Group Weekend, venues, artists, shops and restaurants across town will also be opening their doors in different ways for the loosely formed but shared effort to help those impacted — as well as bring the community together.

While not coordinating the weekend of events, the Arcata Chamber of Commerce website is hosting an interactive map to which local businesses can add their plans, as well as links to fire relief resources and vetted donation sites. (Also see this week's Calendar, Nightlife Grid, and On the Table, as well as northcoastjournal.com for more details.)

"Our intention was just to bring the community together to show solidarity, strength and support," Executive Director Meredith Maier says.

A lot of unknowns remain in the wake of the five-alarm fire, including the cause, which the results of a joint investigation by the Arcata Fire District and Arcata Police Department has classified as "undetermined."

Seven businesses and eight apartments were destroyed in the blaze that moved swiftly through the historic buildings amid high winds after being spotted by an Arcata Fire crew around 2:30 p.m.

No injuries were reported but some residents lost their pets in the fire.

Officials say flames were able to move through the "concealed spaces within the interconnected structures" and a gas manifold damaged by the fire left crews unable to shut down the supply to the buildings on fire.

PG&E crews, which Arcata Fire Chief Chris Emmons said at a meeting earlier in January arrived very quickly on scene, ultimately had to excavate at 10th and H streets to reach and crimp the line.

After the Fire

Dante DiGenova says he assumed the Jan. 2 evacuation of the storied Northtown Books, which he's owned for 19 years and worked at for 35, was for caution's sake. "Dog and keys," were his only priorities on the way out.

The store opened in 1965 in Northtown and H Street was its third location, though all the records of those early years burned. Immediate shock has been supplanted by the work of creating a manifest of what was lost for the insurance company. DiGenova has marked out a map of the shop in his home and moves through a kind of ghost space to recall items he passed and touched every day at the register and among the shelves. "It sort of forces me to relive and go over everything that was lost," he says.

"I can go to the site and look at the rubble, and it's so abstract to me that it doesn't really affect me," he says. But at the recent Zombies of Eureka screening he attended with a coworker, the Lost Loves music video shot at the bookstore took him by surprise, opening with a shot of shoes tapping on the checkered floor and the camera panning around the room. "That was a difficult moment for both of us, just seeing it all again," he says, "everything we had there and how beautiful it was and knowing that it's gone."

Patrons and friends felt the loss, too, and the outpouring of donations and good wishes has been a surprise as well. "Jada Brotman set up that Give a Hand site for us, I think the night of the fire," he marvels, adding people have very generous. "You know when you work a job, it's a job to you and you don't really think about the effect it will have on people," he says. "The notes that people left, it brought tears to my eyes."

And those messages about what the store meant to them made him determined to reopen. "It almost feels like a home not just to us but to our customers."

DiGenova says the store has always defied convention, hanging onto books the staff thought were worthy instead of dumping them after six months like so many booksellers. "If it takes three years to sell something, that's fine ... we know eventually someone's going to come in and be thrilled to find it on the shelf." He hopes to reopen as soon as possible, at least in a temporary spot, and hopefully with his longtime staffers. He'd like to stay close to the plaza, where he still takes his black poodle Tovi for walks.

DiGenova is already hunting for a new rocking horse like the old one, but it's proving elusive. Some of his adult customers he saw "as tiny kids on that rocking horse in the store." It will be tough, but he says, "I love that place and I want to bring it back."

Owner of neighboring shop Dandar's Boardgames and Books Doranna Benker-Gilkey (a Journal contributor) says she deals with stress with sarcasm, so when the insurance company asked for a photo of the damage, she sent them one photo of the flame-engulfed shop and another of the resulting rubble with a circle indicating Dandar's portion. Benker-Gilkey had a good cry alone in the house with their dogs a week ago, "Then, onward," she says with a grim laugh. But at her first State of the City event last Thursday, sitting in a room full of people who were talking about the fire was difficult. "I didn't expect it to get to me like that, just seeing the pictures."

She and husband Dan Gilkey had only moved to H Street from their old location in May, but they were all in. "I'd quit my day job and we were going to grow old there," Benker-Gilkey says. Dandar's "is just an extension of us," she says, explaining the toys and collectibles decorating the space and stored in the back made up Gilkey's entire personal collection amassed over 40 years. Also lost were their son's childhood Star Wars costume helmets and the plaster cast mask she made for her late sister. Family photos, her father's artwork and things to keep "what's left of the family around" are gone as well, and she expects to feel it keenly again when they move into a new spot without all that. "It'll be hard, but it'll be OK," she says, adding she's grateful not to have lost any people.

People, Benker-Gilkey says, are the heart of the business, which has become a hub for game nights and connecting with fellow players. With the help of other business owners, they've only missed a week of game nights. "Outer Space literally opened their doors to us," hosting Star Wars Tuesdays and Magic the Gathering Fridays. "Septentrio also stepped forward right away with a gen-

Without the assistance of agencies from across the county — including Humboldt Bay Fire, Samoa Fire, Kneeland Fire, Westhaven Fire, Loleta Fire, Ferndale Fire, Fortuna Fire, Fieldbrook Fire, Blue Lake Fire, Rio Dell Fire, Arcata-Mad River Ambulance, CAL FIRE Trinidad, and CAL FIRE Weott — the devastation could have been much worse.

On Sunday, a Heroes Parade is set for noon at the Arcata Plaza to honor all the first responders who rushed to the scene, preventing the fire from spreading beyond the single city block.

Like the Arcata Rising concert, the event started with a conversation.

Amy Bohner says she was talking with her husband Steve, fellow co-owner of Alchemy Distillery, about how blown away she was by all the fundraising in those first days after the fire when he said, “Maybe we should do something for the first responders.”

Bohner brought the idea to Maier and next thing she knew, she was taking a crash course on how to put together a parade. It’s something, she says, that’s “been my life for the last couple weeks,” quickly noting that she has “no regrets.”

“They deserve all the kudos they have coming their way,” she says.

Things will kick off around 11 a.m. with local organizations and agencies, from the county’s Office of Emergency Services and the Red Cross to the Humboldt County Sheriff’s Office and CalFire (which will be bringing three therapy dogs) tabling in the plaza center. Then, at 11:50 a.m., Arcata Mayor Kimberley White will read a city proclamation.

Organizers are looking for people to be in place around the plaza before the main event starts at noon from the Arcata Fire station. The Marching Lumberjacks will start things off, followed by Arcata Fire trucks, APD vehicles and those of the departments from across the county that rushed to help, a response that officials have credited with preventing a catastrophic event far beyond the devastation wrought that day.

Other agencies, including PG&E, California Fish and Wildlife Department, City Ambulance, among others, are also invited to participate. Also joining in the two rounds around the plaza will be the operator of the excavator who did the delicate work of tearing down parts of the block to aid fire suppression, along with the piece of heavy equipment on a flatbed truck, Bohner says.

But, she notes, “there’s no real reason for a parade if the community doesn’t come out with signs, cheers and welcome.”

To help set the scene, there will be a free sign-making workshop at the Arcata Playhouse on Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., with cardboard, paints and other craft supplies for people ready to “bring their creativity to show our local heroes our appreciation.”

Watching the plans for this weekend coalesce alongside the outpouring of support that’s been flowing since the flames tore through Arcata’s downtown on that Friday afternoon has been “inspiring,” she says.

“Such local rock stars putting their heads down and saying, ‘Let’s do it,’” Bohner says. “It just really did take the whole city coming together to pull this off in the same month.” ●

eral offer," she says, and now the Magic the Gathering players meet there on Saturdays. Nearby Rain Delay Card Co. is also setting aside a case for Dandar's to sell cards.

The response to the shop's GoFundMe and the Give a Hand effort, as well as fundraising by other businesses including PG&E was beyond what she imagined. At first, it felt awkward, Benker-Gilkey says, "We work for money." But she realized they weren't alone and so many people were affected. "It's important to allow people to help you," she says, "and it's a reminder we aren't in this alone. Dan and I didn't make this store alone, we did a lot of heavy lifting, but it wasn't going to work without a community behind it." Still, the thought of the three-day fundraiser coming up makes her swoon a little.

The donations, says Benker-Gilkey, are going to make it so they can set up a new spot, inventory and, most importantly, gaming tables to reestablish their game nights. "We gotta get that back." Wherever they find a temporary place, the plan is to return to H Street. "We wanna be right back where we were in a new building," she says, "with sprinklers."

In September, after losing their spaces at Cal Poly Humboldt's Stewart Building, Laura Corsiglia, Carol Andersen, Peggy Rivers and her husband Van Shields made a shared studio of a storefront on 10th Street. "It had beautiful light and just a quiet, open space to draw in," says Corsiglia.

None of the artists were on site when the flames started, but Rivers says, "We got to the fire just in time to see the front of the building fall off."

"Not only is it a place to create new work, but sadly, also a place to store work," says Corsiglia, "it was a place that contained a lot of art and a lot of fragile works on paper."

For some of them, it was the bulk of a life's work. "I think we're all still in a certain degree of shock," she says, and while she's grateful nobody was hurt, "It's disorienting to lose so much work."

"We all lost thousands of paintings," says Andersen. But knowing she has so many paintings out in the world, especially locally, has been some comfort. In fact, an ongoing exhibition of work by the four artists at the Morris Graves Museum of Art spared some of their pieces.

Shields, who says he's only recently been able to dedicate himself to making art, laments, "Peggy lost so much more than me. ... But her loss is my loss as well."

Along with the art itself, Rivers' documentation of a lifetime of shows, and decades' worth of journals and slides burned. "Nobody died but a part of me died, for sure," she says. Realizing she had "not one single tool to make anything," she wanted to give up, "but I didn't want that to be my story."

Each of the artists say the community support has been wonderful, not only financially, but emotionally. Andersen says, "I can't even talk about it without crying. I was overwhelmed. ... People in the community and people who collect my work were so generous ... it was such a validation." An artist's work, she says, is often solitary and she didn't expect the outpouring.

Echoing the sentiment, Rivers says, "When you're an artist you're working alone in your cave and you're lucky if someone sees it. ... but to see that your work is valued," she trails off. So many people have reached out with love and assistance, she says. "It's hard to be the recipient of all that love but I'm trying to take it all into my heart."

Shields says talking through their grief with a therapist has been helpful, "and the community response to take care of everyone in this situation has buoyed us."

Corsiglia says renter's insurance will cover the cost of her tools but not lost work. Her husband set up online donation for the group separate sites have gone up as well. "We're so grateful for all of that and so much mobilization and community," she says. "It is a deeply creative community and a community with a lot of solidarity and that's very beautiful also."

Corsiglia has been drawing at home and making a series on black paper called "Aftermath." She says, "This fire destroyed so much of our work, but it did not destroy who we are as artists or our capacity to respond to the world by creating art." Painting is "not always just making something but finding out something."

Rivers and Shields have started sketching again, too. River says, "I'm trying to think about where does my work go from here? ... In the midst of this beauty all around us there is this tragedy and I want to put that into it somehow."

For Andersen, painting has been a balm during difficult times before, and she intends to return to it. "I figure I'll apply the same energy to this crisis and that will be my way." ●

NCJ ON THE TABLE

What's Good for Arcata

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill
jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

The fundraising events for those affected by the Jan. 2 fire in Arcata are legion, and the music shows alone are going to eat your weekend. But what are you going to eat? Luckily, local food folks are pitching in for the cause as well, and we've got suggestions for your community-minded grazing, in case you stumble into the street too rocked out to make good choices.

Ramone's Bakery & Café (in Wildberries, 747 13th St.)

This weekend, 10 percent of sales goes to fire recovery. If your usual muffin feels too rote for the occasion, consider the white chocolate and raspberry tart with chocolate crust (4-inch tart $5.25). Or insist on the princess treatment via the Swedish Princess cake ($5.45), the softest vanilla cake layered with whipped cream, raspberry jam and a rolled coat of marzipan (fondant could never). And you're already in Wildberries, where the Community Giving Program is dedicated to fire relief through February, so drop a few bucks there if you've got them.

North Coast Co-op (811 I St.)

First, first responders, who'll get an extra 10 percent off this weekend. Register round-ups and 1 percent of sales go to help those affected by the fire this weekend, so it's time to splurge on the fancy cheese you're always eyeing.

Richards' Goat Tavern & Tea Room

Belly up to the hot cocoa bar and have $1 for your drink donated. We hear tell there will be both boozy and non-alcoholic offerings like a Dubai hot chocolate and a bevy of toppings to graze.

Café Mokka (495 J St.)

With 10 percent of sales going the cause, you should probably make time for a biscotti to dip in your matcha latte and a moment's respite in the even greener garden. Do you have time to dip yourself in a hot tub as well? Self-care and community care all in one.

Los Bagels (1061 I St.)

Listen, you have your usual order and the $5 dozens on hand this weekend are a gimme. But with 10 percent going to relief for friends and neighbors, bend your knees and lift an orange-chocolate babka into your arms like a fragrant bakery baby ($9). The layers and the chocolate are thicker than the standard, and whoever you share it with will appreciate you both.

Arcata Pizza & Deli (1057 H St.)

The restaurant's own employee Kevin lost everything he had in the fire, so the folks there set up a tip jar for him as well as a QR code for donating. While you're at the counter, a broad slice of the Gotti with roasted red peppers, pesto, fresh baby spinach mozzarella and feta would not go amiss ($7). Assistant editor Kimberly Wear swears by the hot French dip with melted Swiss, crispy French-fried onions, hot au jus and even hotter horsey sauce — she is not wrong ($17).

Mia Bella Cupcakes (1041 H St.)

Swing by on Saturday, when a whopping 20 percent of sales will go to friends and neighbors hit by the fire. Don't torture yourself choosing — load up. Listen, a dozen is only $36 for an outsized amount of joy. A recent trip yielded a stellar banana bread and Biscoff, a fancy green tea and strawberry cupcake and a cookie dough filled and topped one that spoke to our ids. But a special cupcake will also make itself known on Saturday, so you kind of have to get that one, too. Eat well and feed each other. ●

Every Day Feels Like Low-Fired Clay

Annaktrin Burnham's Flowstate

By Alexander Rondeau

artbeat@northcoastjournal.com

At first glance, Annaktrin Burnham's idiosyncratic sculptures are abstract and otherworldly — almost alien. Titling these quirky ceramics Trophies creates an immediate inroad for viewers to recognize their trophy-esque formal qualities: three-dimensional objects designed for display bearing a stable base adorned with a decorative stem or crowning object rising vertically from the base. But to what merit have such unique trophies been awarded?

Tidal Gallery (339 Second St.) in downtown Eureka opened the Trinidad-based artist's solo exhibition Flowstate on Dec. 6, 2025, which will continue until Feb. 4. The driving force of Burnham's show is the Trophies series with 15 ceramic pieces sculpted, fired and glazed using varying materials and techniques, including low, mid and high firing, magnesium carbonate crackle glaze, frost and black ice porcelain, and stoneware in soda. The sculptures are presented atop pedestals Burnham designed and fabricated herself. Additionally, the exhibition includes the aptly named "Chains": a large-scale installation of white, mid-fire frost porcelain loops bound together, forming chains suspended from the gallery's ceiling.

Though each ceramic piece in Trophies intimates the commemorative and design attributes of trophies, the artist designates value systems in her appraisals of what we might choose to celebrate that delineate from the competitive nature of trophies and awards. Here, Burnham's trophies redeploy the modernist drive for innovation and victory through competition into curious sculptures that venerate everyday lived experiences, phenomena and even places that we may otherwise perhaps take for granted or consider to be signs of weakness antithetical to celebration.

For example, "Mom Brain" is an ode to the artist's experiences of caretaking and the fogginess of early motherhood, taking shape as a 14-by-6-by-6-inch ceramic sculpture crowned with a cloud sitting atop a spire emanating from a green U-shaped base. As a trophy, "Mom Brain" does not celebrate the phenomenon of feeling scatterbrained itself, but is instead merited by the artist as recognition of her own personal navigation of a physiological and emotional period that is expected of mothers through social reproduction as unpaid labor. And so, too, this trophy is offered to many other mothers, parents and caretakers. In a country without universal access to healthcare, reproductive rights, childcare, parental leave and many other social services that benefit parents of young children, a trophy feels like an unduly small commemorative gesture.

As a series, Trophies finds cause for celebrations not despite cultural values that favor modernist, capitalist innovation but in spite of these hierarchical rubrics that privilege certain types of traditionally masculine labor over other typically feminized forms of labor. Are Burnham's Trophies warped and quirky — though equally beautiful and inviting — because we cannot otherwise imagine bestowing trophies for anything other than superiority? Are the abstract qualities of her sculptures mirrors that humorously poke at cultural norms and values to reflect systems of power that not only create competitive systems, but also reward dominance? Indeed, Burnham's abstraction is an aesthetic choice that points toward our need to expand what success could look like.

The exhibition's title Flowstate nods to artistic intuition in the creation stages, wherein a "flow state" is achieved once the artist loses herself in her process, time stretches and artistic output pours steadily through a stream of consciousness that eclipses self-awareness. Burnham's foregrounding of the flow state also offers an entry point into longstanding debates in art criticism around determining objective versus subjective interpretation, and whether the developments of critical theory, contemporary art theory, art criticism and art history have produced canons and rubrics to objectively assess the cultural, artistic and conceptual value of artworks. The objective camp would turn to formal and sociocultural elements such as color theory, technique, art history and cultural histories that transcend personal and individualized interpretations. Meanwhile, the subjective camp would legitimize intuitive, emotional reactions to artworks, individual taste and personal lived experiences in deriving meaning. Many art historians and critics have noted masculinist undercurrents in objective frameworks that discount personal emotions and taste — which are coded as feminine — in the interpretation of art. Flowstate comfortably makes room for both camps through the artist's use of abstraction, which serves as a cultural critique by subverting trophies, and in creating an exhibition that is exciting and aesthetically puzzling.

"The personal is political," a famous feminist credo, is playfully embodied in Flowstate as Burnham sculpts her inner world and the shape of her brain fog into tangible moments of celebration. As she offers in her exhibition statement, "As these trophies come together, they shape a story and stand as dedications to the inglorious victories of daily life, the mundane, the tedious, and the darker moments that also define me." ●

Vision Creation New Sun

By Collin Yeo

setlist@northcoastjournal.com

A lot of the problems in contemporary society can be traced to the servile tradition of western liberal compromise, and one of central stations of failure within that tradition is the long list of Nazi officials who died natural deaths as free men after World War II. One of the more egregious examples of this in terms of ideological damage to the illusion of a free society is the Nazi jurist and political scientist Carl Schmitt. His philosophy of a total, shameless power grab through legal justification is currently electrifying the repulsive nerds responsible for trying to corral the melting, demented pervert running bloody skid marks all over the traditional norms of conduct for the American ruling class.

Schmitt's theories can be dummed down to institutional capture and corrosion, essentially using the weak points of liberal democracy to take over the administrative departments of the state, and then using the authority of those compromised departments to rewrite the legal framework of power. It's like the neoliberal tradition of tax breaks for the rich, only instead of capital, it's an upward redistribution of power into an elite, authoritarian ruling core. It's so effective and devastating that it is presently turning the mirage of liberal democracy into a fascist pyramid scheme eight decades after the end of the Third Reich. Meet the new boss, same as the old boss.

While we are all trying to absorb the monstrosity of two very public executions of American citizens by masked, state-sanctioned stormtroopers, we are also reaching a peak contamination level of toxic disinformation, as the administration's officials are using the Israeli Defense Force's preferred tactic of shooting first and accusing the victims of terrorism after. A warm homecoming for the imperial outpost atrocities of foreign policy.

Why am I bringing this up in a weekly live music column? Because, as is the case with many political observations I have made here in the past, this is another marker on the road to a world where the freedom to enjoy live music, art and community will not be guaranteed, or perhaps even allowed. Hell, this is actually a giant fucking glowing LED billboard of horror, an existential threat to every aspect of life as you know it. Do not count on voting your way out of this. Do not count on the sanctity of your human rights. The Constitution is just paper, and paper burns. Everything burns, in fact, unless living people work together to put that fire out.

Living people working together. That's community. That's cooperation and resistance. You take any of those four words out of that first sentence and communal resistance takes a knee on the way down to a painful, humiliating death. And who wants that? The future is too bright with stellar fusillades of gorgeous possibility. I titled this week's column after the record I was listening to while writing it — one of my favorites — Vision Creation Newsun by the Japanese band Boredoms. That record reinvented music for me and underlined that there are truly no rules that bind other than the rusty shackles of tradition. We are human, we are amazing, we can do anything.

Be safe and do amazing things.

Thursday

Adam Moezinia is a versatile, Juilliard-trained jazz guitarist and bandleader from New York City who will be bringing his group The Folk Element Trio to the Arcata Playhouse tonight at 7 p.m. I watched some of the trio's live performances on YouTube and found the music to be a fine mix of contemporary jazz and traditional blues and spiritual traditions played in a fashion that reflects the living energy of that magical city. Old is bridged to the new like dirty bricks spined with scaffolding and haute couture flashes in the grimy, sleepless subway arteries. I really liked it, and the guitar, bass and drum trio is an excellent format to really breathe and flow. Check it out for $20; you won't regret it.

Friday and Saturday

I'm going to make a rare move here and lump the weekend nights together under the banner of the Arcata Rising Fund-raiser shows at Humbrews from Friday through Sunday. We all know about the dreadful fire on the second day of 2026 that claimed the beloved half block from 10th and H streets to the alleyway, and this is a fine example of our local music community coming together to raise money for the folks who lost everything. There are too many acts to name, and complete information can be found elsewhere (see page TK), so I'll merely express my gratitude to those involved. It is very clear, once again, that our greatest power is with the people in our community. As it was and ever shall be, amen.

Sunday

A slightly late birthday show for the late Brazilian composer Antonio Carlos Jobim, who would have been 99 years old last Sunday had he not died 31 years ago as of Dec. 8, an infamous calendar day for musicians that also saw the deaths of John Lennon and Dimebag Darrell — in different years, of course. Anyway, the Creative Sanctuary jazzbos have come together for a matinee celebration of the master's songs, and at 4 p.m. you can join James Zeller, Danny Gaon, Ramsey Isaacs and Matthew Seno along with some special guests who will all, I am certain, do it quite right. Tickets are a sliding scale $15-$30, but if you are a little light at the moment, you will not be turned away for a lack of moolah.

Monday

Experimental Los Angeles band Ding Mao will be playing an all-ages gig tonight at 7 p.m. at the Siren's Song Tavern for $5. The group has a loud and busy sound with a big vocal presence and treated elements coating the guitars and rhythm section. That's the best I can do with what I've got but, if that sounds intriguing, you can fill in the blanks yourself.

Tuesday

It's a good night to stay home and brush up on first aid and self-defense with your friends and loved ones. After all, midwinter is the perfect time to practice the essential arts of communal preservation. Don't be caught unprepared by an icy storm.

Wednesday

Canadian/Californian Steve Poltz first came to widespread national attention 30 years ago when he collaborated with the singer Jewel on some of her mega-hits. He's also known for his proto-indie rock band the Rugburns, who are still burning away onstage from time to time. However, tonight he'll be doing a solo show for those of you who like the simplicity of an acoustic guitar, good songs and a campfire singalong atmosphere. You'll have to imagine the woodsmoke, as tonight's 7 p.m. gig is at Trinidad Town Hall, but you get the idea ($30). ●

Collin Yeo (he/him) is in the zone, trying to stay out of the Interzone.

A Banjo Makes 3, submitted

After the devastating Jan. 2 fire that erased an entire block of beloved Arcata businesses, homes and art spaces, the community is rallying. Arcata Rising takes over Humboldt Brews for three days, Friday, Jan. 30, at 8 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 31, from noon to midnight and Sunday, Feb. 1, from 1 to 8 p.m. with dozens of local bands, artists, performers and speakers, plus raffles, food and drink specials, and more ($10 minimum donation per night; proceeds go directly to those affected). Nearby, Richards' Goat hosts an '80s-'90s dance party benefit on Friday, Jan. 30, at 8:30 p.m. (donation), Peaches & Pearls brings burlesque on Saturday, Jan. 31, from 2 to 6 p.m., and Arcata Playhouse offers poetry and open mic at Soulraiser on Saturday, Jan. 31, from 7 to 9 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 1, at noon, the Heroes Parade honors fire victims and first responders at the Arcata Plaza (free).

Four acts. One stage. Zero dry eyes. Grab your boots and your baggage and head to the Eureka Theater on Saturday, Jan. 31, for Honky-Tonk & Heartache: An Evening with Hannah Juanita, Noelle & the Deserters, Mose Wilson, Harmonic Howl ($20). A night of Nashville neo-traditional, California country-rock, outlaw grit and classic twang that'll leave your heart bruised in the best way. Trust us, this lineup hits harder than a George Jones song. Get more info at theeurekatheater.org.

Ready, set, BinGO! The Eureka Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence invite you to Formula Fun Bingo, an ages 18+ night of pole position jokes, fast and furious daubing and the only drag race where sequins beat horsepower on Saturday, Jan. 31, from 5 to 9 p.m. at Bayside Grange ($30, $20 advance, sass provided free of charge). Let's face it, we all need a night of laughs and letting loose, and the Sisters excel at that. This racecar-themed Bingo event features a costume contest (drag racers, hot rods and pit-crew realness encouraged) raffles, concessions and dinner by Los Giles food truck — all benefitting Kinetic Universe.

Hug your loved ones. Abolish ICE. Sentimental Value

The Oscars and Sentimental Value

By John J. Bennett
screens@northcoastjournal.com

Sure as death and taxes, the Academy Award nominations are once again upon us. The big news: Sinners has obliterated the previous record for previous nominations. Time now being what it is — some previously unknown, unknowable glue-trap of speed and paralysis — a lot of time has passed since the movie debuted and, I see now, I wrote so rapturously about it. Hard to say whether its omission from my year-end favorites list is due to recency bias, chemical interference, world events or my own degrading cognitive capacity, but its unprecedented reception by the Academy has given me pause. I've certainly thought about Sinners since last April, haven't I? Reminded now, I remember the exhilaration of the experience of it, but somehow it hasn't lived in my memory like it seems it should, and I can't say why. Regardless, it is a bracing development for a relatively young filmmaker like Ryan Coogler to be recognized for a creation wholly his own, moreover one that has vampires and Tommy guns in it.

In fact, looking over the ten Best

Picture nominees, I'm struck by the depth and breadth of their variety, and more than a little surprised/validated by the number of genre-leaning entries. The broadening of the Academy seems to have succeeded in breathing lively new life into the proceedings (including, I'm told, the ceremony itself) and dispelling some of the stuffiness with which they have often been burdened. Though Hamnet does seem to have something of the Merchant-Ivory about it; haven't seen it. (A friend attributed my disinterest in Chloe Zhao's latest to antipathy toward what he called "chick flicks," but beyond questions of authorship, I have little to no interest in William Shakespeare's backstory; this includes my borderline contempt for 1998 crowd-favorite Shakespeare in Love.)

If nothing else, the nominations are an occasion to explore the movies that the industry has agreed upon as the year's best. The system is imperfect at best (aren't they all?), but it can at least deliver us a primer or rough outline or jumping-off point. I'm a little behind this year, having yet to see Marty Supreme

(no contentious reason for that) or The Secret Agent (access remains an issue), but I was prompted to catch up with Sentimental Value, the 800-pound Nordic gorilla of the nominees.

SENTIMENTAL VALUE. Far Northern European cinema remains something of a straw man in my education, a sphere of influence burdened equally by my own contrarianism and the importance assigned to it by the critical community. Ingmar Bergman's always been one of the elephants in the screening room, a titan whose influence is indisputable, but for whom I find reverence frequently suspect. Probably unfairly, I've lumped in Joachim Trier, the Danish-born Norwegian auteur who, after years of run-up, became something of a nerd-household name with The Worst Person in the World (2021). The cineastes were all-abuzz back then, probably rightfully, but even in the newly widened cinematic landscape of early post-COVID, I passed. We can't hide from our own preconceptions forever.

There are indeed elements of Senti- mental Value that fly in the face of my own, well, sentimental values regarding cinema. It opens with emotionally freighted voiceover, belabors the difficulty of parent-child relationships and, in its portrait of the artist as an old man, revisits some pretty worked-over territory. But, this being the current moment, those elements do more to distance it from the swollen middle of contemporary movies than to align it with something else. Furthermore, Trier and his cast are so committed to the emotional truth of the story (about a famous filmmaker and even more famously absent father trying to reconnect with his adult daughters) that some of the tropes transcend cliché.

Gustav Borg (Stellan Skarsgård), who hasn't made a feature film in 15 years, returns to Oslo for the funeral of his ex-wife, the mother of his children. He's been a long time gone and he's armed with a new screenplay with a lead role intended for his elder daughter Nora (Renata Reinsve). Caught up in her own turmoil, of which her contempt for her father is certainly part, she wants nothing to do with it. In a happy accident, Gustav crosses paths with an American movie star (Elle Fanning) at a festival, casts her in the part, secures Netflix financing and sets to work preparing to shoot what is now a doomed, deeply personal project.

It's a testament to Trier's vision that dozens of production companies are listed in the credits here. This is the sort of movie that doesn't really get made anymore (especially not in this country), but is an opportunity for the medium to do some of the things that it is uniquely capable of doing. NCJ WASHED UP

Moon Snail Pie

By Mike Kelly

I was walking along Humboldt Bay when I heard, "Psst. Hey!" A Lewis's moon snail (Neverita lewisii) was calling me from a shallow pool in the tidal mudflat.

The snail said, "I want to enter the big baking contest. But those jerk-offs will never let a snail win. So, can you pose as me? Plus, I need you to bring me the ingredients for a blackberry pie, but replace the shortening with chicken fat. That's a sure-fire winning secret. When they award my prize, I'll reveal myself."

I stared at her almost-spherical light brown and white shell and her large round foot. She looked like a thick-crust extra-cheese pizza with a baseball stuffed into it. And as big as her shell was, her foot seemed far too big to fit inside.

I was pleased to see her intact shell because I only find fragments of moon snail shells washed up on open-ocean beaches. I'm guessing these pieces are broken while the shells travel out of the bay on tidal currents or in dredging spoils. I also noticed her extended tubular siphon, which didn't seem capable of speech, and her four short sensory tentacles that seemed useless for making pies.

"Whoa," I said, "But how are you going to roll out a crust?"

"When moon snails lay eggs, we mix thousands of them with sand and mucous, and then form this mixture into a wide, collar-shaped ribbon. It looks like a piece of faded truck tire innertube. A large female like me can make one the size of a pie crust. I'll just sub the crust ingredients in place of the eggs and mucous."

"OK, but what does a predator of other mollusks know about fruit pies? Look at the beveled small round holes in all these clam shells."

"The rudimentary eyes on two of my sensory tentacles cannot resolve that. But yes, I drill into mollusk shells using my rasping tongue, or radula, aided by a mild acid that I discharge through my mouth. I can drill only about a half a millimeter a day, so I prefer thin-shelled clams. Then I inject digestive enzymes into the hole and lap up the slurry. So, yes, fruit pies probably taste nasty. But I want glory, not dessert."

I wondered how I'd get an aquatic invertebrate safely to the award ceremony. Well, it turns out that a moon snail's foot is huge because it is pumped up with water. They use this inflated foot to plow through the mudflat, digging up clams like a bulldozer. But they can shed that water through their siphon, fit back into the shell, and then seal themselves inside using a flat fingernail-like door called an "operculum," which is attached to the foot. They can also absorb air through their skin and can supposedly live out of water for a week.

At the award ceremony, the emcee said, "Folks, there's been a terrorist attack on our esteemed panel of judges. We found a blackberry pie spiked with mud and sharp bits of shell. Deport him!" He pointed at me as masked thugs zip-tied my wrists.

I expected to see the moon snail high-tailing it for the exit. But she said, "Let him go! It was I, the moon snail, who made that pie from scratch. I thought the chicken fat crust would make up for the debris. It was all due to my hubris and incompetence, and I am sorry."

I thought such a rare display of honesty and humility would get her set free. But instead, the jerk-offs beat her to death with a flagpole.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF

Jan E. Silva AKA Jan Elizabeth Silva
CASE NO. PR2600017

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of Jan E. Silva AKA Jan Elizabeth Silva
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner, Jeffrey Harrison In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that Jeffrey Harold Harrison be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The Petition requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examinatio in the file kept by the court.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on February 19, 2026 at 9:30 a.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 4
For information on how to appear remotely for your hearing, please visit <https://www.humboldt.courts.ca.gov/>

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. ATTORNEY FOR PETITIONER:

CITY OF FORTUNA

Notice of Public Hearing and FIRST READING OF THE FORTUNA CITY COUNCIL

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Monday, February 2, 2026, at 6:00 pm or as soon thereafter as possible, the Fortuna City Council will hold a public hearing and conduct a first reading of an ordinance in the City Hall Council Chamber, 621 11th Street, Fortuna, California, for the following purpose:

Consider the Planning Commission's recommendation to the Fortuna City Council to adopt amendments to the Zoning Regulations (Title 17 of the Fortuna Municipal Code). The text amendments would apply citywide in the City of Fortuna. The purpose of the amendments is to ensure compliance with current State law for accessory dwelling units (ADUs) and junior accessory dwelling units.

Chapter 17.06, Regulations that Apply to Specific Uses, repeals section 17.06.001.5 (Accessory Dwelling Units) in its entirety, and adopts a revised 17.06.001.5 (Accessory Dwelling Units and Junior Accessory Dwelling Units) that is consistent with State law.

Chapter 17.06, Regulations that Apply to Specific Uses, amendments to the definition of Dwelling Unit in section 17.06.184.5 (Short-term rentals).

Chapter 17.08 Definitions and Illustrations, amendments to the definition of Dwelling, second residential in section 17.08.222.

STATUTORY REFERENCES FOR CALIFORNIA CITIES, correct the Government Code citation for ADU law.

The Planning Commission's recommended zoning text amendments and resolution are available on the City's website at <https://towncloud.io/go/fortuna-ca/agendas/680>, scroll to 5.a Planning Commission Business. A printed copy is available also for review at the Community Development Department, located in City Hall, during regular business hours.

Environmental Information: The proposed zoning ordinance text amendments are exempt from the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA). Pursuant to Public Resources Code § 21080.17, CEQA does not apply to ordinances implementing Government Code § 65852.1, or Article 2 (commencing with Section 66314) or Article 3 (commencing with Section 66333) of Chapter 13 of Division 1 of Title 7 of the Government Code, which governs ADUs and JADUs.

The ordinance is also categorically exempt under CEQA Guidelines §15303 (Class 3), which covers the construction or conversion of small accessory structures, such as ADUs and JADUs.

The public and all interested persons are invited to appear at the time and place specified above to give oral or written testimony regarding this matter. You may send written comments to semmons@ci.fortuna.ca.us by 12:00 pm the day of the hearing. Comments will be forwarded to the City Council for their consideration. For further information, call the Community Development Department at (707) 725-1408.

In compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, if you need special assistance to participate in this meeting, please contact the City Clerk's Office at (707) 725-7600. Notification 48 hours before the meeting will enable the City to make reasonable arrangements to ensure accessibility to this meeting (28 CFR 35.102 - 35.104 ADA Title II).

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF MARGARET R. WOODCOCK CASE NO. PR2500291

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of MARGARET RUTH WOODCOCK A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner EDWARD R. WOODCOCK

In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. The petition for probate requests that EDWARD R. WOODCOCK be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on February 19, 2026 at 9:30 a.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Room: 4

For information on how to appear remotely for your hearing, please visit <https://www.humboldt.courts.ca.gov/>

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

OBITUARIES

Sherria (Sheri) Tyler

January 1, 1950 - November 29, 2025

Sherria (Sheri) Tyler, age 75, was born on January 1, 1950, and following a two-year battle, with Pancreatic Cancer, she passed away peacefully, in her home on November 29, 2025.

Sheri was an accomplished spinner, knitter, and teacher. She taught spinning lessons to various groups in Humboldt County. Sheri raised, sheered, spun and knitted her animals' fleece (alpaca, angora goats, llamas, and sheep), and sold them at the Arcata Farmer's Market for 23 years.

Sheri is survived by her husband, Steve Tyler of Arcata; two sons, Zack Tyler of Washington State; Josh Tyler of Vermont State, and three grandchildren. The Tyler family would like to thank the staff of Hospice of Humboldt for the care, compassion, and comfort provided to Sheri during the last few weeks of her life. Memorial donations may be made directly to Hospice of Humboldt, in Eureka CA.

Genevieve Helen Hemenway

December 19, 1928 - January 17, 2026

Born Genevieve Helen Schlinkmann, to Hazel E. Schlinkmann (Bowman) and Fred Schlinkmann. Genevieve was adopted at a young age by her devoted, adoring father, Silvio (Botchie) Santi of Fields Landing, CA, where she lived for over eighty years.

Genevieve grew up in and around the Fields Landing Hotel and Botchie's Crab Stand (est. 1928) both owned and operated by her parents, (Hazel and Botchie). Her early years included memories of the town as a bustling whaling port. She was enthralled by the player piano in the hotel, she would watch guests play for hours at a time. She took to the keyboard quickly as a child and her love for music grew from there, leading her to become an accomplished pianist.

After attending Field School and Eureka Senior High School, (class of 1947), Genevieve attended Humboldt State University and studied music. Her talent was noted and she was offered placement with the Philharmonic Orchestra on the east coast. Though she did not ultimately join the orchestra, her musical gift was present throughout her life. She taught her two daughters to play the piano and ukulele, and entertained several generations of family and friends with her talent throughout the years.

In December 1950, Genevieve married the love of her life, Eureka High classmate, Ellis Hemenway. It was a quick and lasting match - on their third date, Ellis asked her to marry him, and they were married for over 63 years. Two weeks after their marriage, Ellis was deployed to combat in the Korean War. Genevieve endured the longest, most difficult two years of her 97-year-long life during his deployment. Upon his return, Ellis and Genevieve were together constantly, and never spent any time apart.

Genevieve and Ellis took ownership of Botchie's Crab Stand from Genevieve's parents which became known throughout the Redwood Empire for selling only the freshest and highest-quality local Dungeness crab. The couple happily committed to long, hard-working days spent on their feet side-by-side working through the winter crab season year after year. The hard work and long hours offered Genevieve and her family the opportunity to spend months each year at their summer home in Dinsmore, where she could savor life.

Genevieve enjoyed hunting and fishing with family and had a deep love for the outdoors. She learned the art and science of gardening from her father and her vegetable gardens were always teeming with beautiful produce. She loved gardenias, begonias, orchids and African violets and was skilled at tending the most finicky of flowers. Genevieve was a friend to nature, always taking care to enjoy and protect the beauty she found. She instilled her love and respect for the natural world in her daughters and their growing families.

Genevieve was an accomplished cook, taking up many of the dishes and traditions of Northern Italy, her father's homeland. Homemade gnocchi were a specialty, pillows of love covered in rich, flavorful red sauce made with chicken, pork and salami. Cakes and pies were also a specialty, and she loved to treat her family to homemade mincemeat or huckleberry pies.

Genevieve is survived by her daughters Victoria Smith and Cynthia (Iver) Skavdal; granddaughters Christine (Sergio) Mendes and Allison (Mike) Skavdal-Taylor; and grandsons Blaine Owsley, Loren (Becky) Skavdal, and Carson Skavdal; and five great-grandchildren: Christopher Mendes, Reese and Riley Skavdal-Taylor, and Marissa and Iver Skavdal. She is also survived by her niece Sandra (Norm) Ball, nephew Tom (Ardis) Schlinkmann and families.

Genevieve was predeceased by her husband, Ellis B. Hemenway, her parents, Hazel and Botchie (Silvio) Santi, her in-laws, Bernard A. and Marie (Wasmuth) Hemenway, biological father, Fred Schlinkmann, brothers Herb Schlinkmann, and Fredrick Schlinkmann.

A private graveside service will be held late January.

A special thank you to the people at Redwood Memorial Hospital, Hospice of Humboldt and Alder Bay Assisted Living Facility for their excellent, loving care.
